

Ross Bowring presents...

Stripped Naked Sales Letters!

Ogle The Hardcore Salesmanship That Gave One Ecstatic Copywriting Client
A 714% Swell In Conversions...

Plus... Two BONUS Letters EXPOSED!

By Ross Bowring
www.BowringMarketing.com

© 2010 Ross Bowring Inc.

ALL RIGHTS RESERVED. No part of this book or its associated materials may be reproduced or transmitted in any form or by any means, electronic or mechanical, including photocopying, recording, or by any informational store or retrieval system without express written permission from the publisher.

PRINTED IN THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

Hi. Ross Bowring here...

In just a moment I'm about to expose three sales letters to a nasty breeze...

And if you fancy slappin' rocket thrusters on your journey to write more profitable sales copy, you'll want to take in the view.

Also... before each letter I'm going to give you pointers to writing a particular type of sales copy...

Story based copy before the first letter...

Cash-on-demand copywriting before the second.

And lastly, before the third, I'll walk you through some actionable tips to creating compelling teaser copy.

Now... don't think the proven persuasion devices you're about to eye up came to me in a mega-watt lightbulb moment.

Far from it. They're only part of my copywriting arsenal thanks to long and sweaty study at the feet of direct response masters.

And I'm certainly not the only copywriter to do that...

Thousands plough through the "must-read" copywriting classics...

Hundreds wade into thick home-study courses penned by legendary copywriters like John Carlton and Clayton Makepeace...

Tens more trek out to copywriting workshops.

And why not? It's a proven road to penning killer sales copy.

But for me, I wanted to go above and beyond for every client. My homepage explains why being a former stutterer was the engine which spurred me to go the extra miles. However, for the purposes of this report you just need to know this...

To sculpt sales letters like the ones you're about to pillage for tactics, I knew I had to take a road less traveled.

That's why I've cast my net planet-wide for any marketer... (some of whom you can legitimately call reclusive geniuses...) who can help make my sales copy more persuasive and profitable for clients.

But I was just getting started...

You don't need a Tony Robbins book to tell you that to excel at something... you find someone who's doing what you want to do... and do what they do!

And that's why I jumped at the opportunity to mentor with Vin Montello.

His students have gone onto great things. Kevin Rogers to name just one... the respected head writer of John Carlton's Stable of Copywriters.

When I was starting out, I remember tearing through Kevin's tremendous report (downloadable on his must-read blog) where he took readers "Behind the Copy" of one of his first ClickBank No.1's. As Kevin yanked a white sheet off one tactic after another, my eye's popped out of my head. I had so much to learn! But I set to the task with fury.

In fact, I've joked with Vin that I'm his stalker.

As although I've cultivated my own distinct writing style over the years, where I can, I've incorporated many of Vin's more stealth conversion-boosting tricks. A handful of which he's been kind enough to let me scatter throughout this report.

In fact, in Vin's testimonial on my homepage, he says a sample I sent him to audition to join his elite squadron of students... blew his socks off!

High praise coming from a guy with so many six and seven figure launches under his belt.

But here's why it's also great news for YOU...

That sample which made such an impact on a guy who's been around the block in Vin Montello, is the first letter I'm exposing to public nakedness.

It came about when Lisa Braithwaite, a veteran public speaking coach in Santa Barbara, California, asked me to re-write the sales page for her e-course.

Research into Lisa's product dug up a number of "basic skills" which she teaches all her clients. As you'll see, in the letter, I changed their name to "The Essential Skills" to boost their perceived importance.

Getting these essential skills down is a shortcut to becoming a confident public speaker... and they've never been put in a step-by-step course before... so that's how the "secret shortcut" hook came to be.

But the letter still needed a micro-hook...

A story which would be a gravitational pull the reader couldn't fight in their need to know... what happens next?

And that's important because a big problem with on-line story based copy is that it's often written in what you might call, Grandpa style.

We've all got a loveable relative who tells long-winded... what was the point in that? stories. Of course, when it's your own Grandpa doing the story spinning you sit there at least politely feigning attention.

Readers, in contrast, aren't so patient. They shoot for the exits when Grandpa shows up.

Here are a few tips on how to avoid that in your sales copy...

- 1) Split your story up into bite-sized parts.

You'll see I've done this in the letter you're about to read... then used a tease at the end of each part to sling the reader into benefit rich sales copy.

- 2) Make the product the hero.

In the case of an information product, you can make the "insights you discovered" what saved the day in your struggle to... make money from Adwords... or conquer Forex. The exact same insights you'll be sharing with your lucky reader. In the letter, watch for how I do this with Lisa's essential skills.

- 3) Select a story with the most emotional touch points possible.

Since purchases are fueled by emotion, then justified by logic, it makes sense to give your reader multiple opportunities to get into your story on an emotional level.

When I was deciding which story to run with in this letter, one option was that Lisa also taught life-skills at a women's prison. However, the emotional ties people have to their high school experience are powerful. That's why this (true) story won out.

Before you dive into the letter itself, here's the testimonial Lisa made sure to send me about our work together...

"Conversions Have Shot Up 714%!"

"Before working with Ross, I wasn't getting the results I wanted from my e-course sales page.

Ross came along and shook things up. My conversions have shot up 714%(!) and I'm making more money from the sales letter than ever before.

Besides the great results, Ross was super easy to work with and approached the job as a partnership. He took the time to understand where I was coming from, especially my discomfort with the traditional bombastic sales letter.

He helped me understand the concepts behind the sales letter so that I was never in the dark about where he was going with the content.

And he paid attention to my style and made sure the page reflected my voice and my personality.

In a nutshell: hire Ross and sell more stuff!"

Lisa Braithwaite
Public Speaking Coach and Author
www.coachlisab.com

Now get into the letter. Don't miss anything. If you're as passionate about sales copy as I am, you'll find gold from top to bottom.

When you're done scavenging this letter for tactics, the second letter I've stripped bare ups the copywriting ante even further, giving you a framework you can use to create cash-on-demand.

Quickly tell your reader how simple, easy and quick your solution is.

Public speaking is suddenly so much easier when you discover...

“The Secret Shortcut To Passionate Applause And Sudden Standing Ovations”

There's much more drama in a "sudden" standing-o. It takes the mental imagery to another level of intensity.

*'Believe it or not... you don't need magical speaking powers to bask in enthusiastic applause or even a standing ovation...
You'll win over any audience when you follow a proven step-by-step roadmap...
A time-saving shortcut to the confidence you need to turn any audience into your biggest fans... hanging on every word... and eager to call you the best public speaker they know...'*

Lisa Braithwaite
Public Speaking Coach And Author
Of The 7-Week Shortcut To Public Speaking Confidence

Dear Friend:

You're in a tough spot...

A short sentence gets your reader onto the slippery slide with ease. The best starter words... "You" and "You're".

I know because I've been there before.

You want a great audience response to your next presentation...

After all, how thrilling will it be to see...

- Your ideas embraced
- Your talents recognized
- Your hard work validated

But you're not sure how to pull it off.

We tend to think there's "insider secrets" to doing anything well. And saying their hunch is "dead-on" is a way to compliment their smarts without brown nosing.

You know there must be secrets to giving a confident presentation... and your hunch is dead-on because...

As you read this letter carefully you'll quickly see how an easy to follow road-map is about to scratch public speaking off your worry-list for good.

Because no matter how much experience you have in front of audiences, or what kind of trouble you've had with public speaking in the past...

You're about to discover how to...

“Instantly Click With Your Audience...”

Wow everybody in attendance and turn your moment in the spotlight into a personal triumph you treasure for weeks.

Best of all, you'll do it...

...without being crippled by anxiety.

...without worrying if your audience will like you or not.

...and without 'going blank' at the worst possible moment.

A qualifying sentence like this should be so broad in scope that anyone in your target market should be able to say... "that includes me!"

Fact is, the movie star charisma dripping from confident public speakers isn't something they are born with.

To hold an audience in the palm of your hand you simply need to follow the little known shortcut I'm about to guide you down. But before we go there, I'm sure part of you is thinking...

“Me..? A Master Communicator...
You're Kidding, Right...”

You're right to ask... is this even for real?

If I wasn't eye witness to how far my coaching clients have come in such a short time, I wouldn't believe it either. In other words, I know how you feel.

Just don't let your natural skepticism stand between you and this unique opportunity.

Beating down the big, "I need natural talent to be good at public speaking" objection.

Most people have shaky self-esteem and doubt their own abilities.

Best to acknowledge it, not pretend it doesn't exist. Then reassure them they're not alone.

No serious self-starter would turn their back on this information and here's why...

Note how throughout the letter, benefits like this one are bolded for scanners.

“There’s A Long Rocky Road To Becoming A Confident Public Speaker... And Then There’s A Cinch Of A Shortcut... And I’m About To Hand You That Shortcut...”

A step-by-step roadmap anybody can use, regardless of public speaking experience, to give powerful presentations that will get you the exact response you’re craving.

Of course, you could set out on your own like I did to crack the code to unforgettable audience reactions...

You might call my adventures....

“Hard Times At Ridgemon High!”

Hi. Lisa Braithwaite here...

And I haven’t always been a public speaking coach.

For 8 years... starting in 1992 I got my own public speaking education speaking to groups of high school students about issues like healthy relationships and body image.

And let me tell you... (like you don’t know already)

...teenagers can be ruthless.

Where you can, harmonize with the reader by stating a commonly held truth.

Ready to blow off or tune out any well meaning adult who dares cross their path.

But win their respect... their attention...

And you can win just about anybody’s.

Crucial sentence. It makes Lisa's expertise relevant to whatever public speaking challenge the reader is facing.

Yet hard as I’d try, it wasn’t happening.

You know those Hollywood movies where the substitute teacher walks into the class of troubled teens and turns them around...

Here, I'm referencing in an off-hand way, the movie sub-genre this story falls into. This gives the reader a familiar frame of reference in which to make sense of the story. It also lets them know that like in a movie, there could be plot twists ahead. And importantly, it pushes them to further desire "narrative closure" so they keep reading to see how it all ends.

... that was me...

... only I never got to the part where they turn around!

I'll tell you how it turned out and just how forcefully it changed the course of my life, but first I want to ask you...

What's YOUR plan to increase your confidence in front of audiences?

Be more persuasive...

Less nervous...

More yourself...

Should you enroll in your own school of hard knocks like I did... absorb the body-blows of trial and error and just try to 'figure stuff out' eventually.

Or will you ride with an elite group of go-getters gunning it down the...

Here I'm quickly making a pivot from "story copy" to "YOU" sales copy. Here I do it by challenging the reader to admit that they don't have a fix to their problem.

"High Speed Expressway To Powerful Public Speaking"

Because faster than you can say 'anxiety attack' the shortcut I've got for you will bump off any thoughts of letting people down by backing out of a presentation at the last minute.

In fact, whatever type of presentation is sneaking up on you, you'll soon be loose as a goose about facing your audience.

Susan will tell you... when she reached out to me the expectations she'd put on herself for a big presentation were weighing heavy...

It's true. Susan did reach out to Lisa for coaching. Explicitly saying so serves to infer that clients pursue Lisa, that she's in-demand and well-known.

Inviting the reader to join the much desired "in-crowd".

“I Was Uptight And Worried About A Speech I Was To Give To A Large Women’s Conference...”

But with Lisa’s help, by the time the conference rolled around I was prepared and at ease.

As a result, I received the highest rating of any presenter at the conference!

~ Susan Hyatt, Certified Life Coach,
Ideal Life Design, Evansville IN

"Situation" or "Event" would have made sense too. But there's infinitely more drama in "Doomsday Scenario".

Always ask yourself as you edit your writing... Am I missing a more compelling way to say this?

Simply put: Don't just get ready to receive pats on the back for a job well done... prepare to say a sweet "See-ya-later" to...

“The Humiliating Doomsday Scenario Keeping Speakers Awake At Night”

When I turned to public speaking coaching in 2005 after 16 years of professional public speaking, client after client would regale to me almost the exact same public speaking nightmare.

It begins innocently enough...

After a glowing introduction you take the stage to warm applause. You place your notes in front of you and scan the many waiting faces.

No blood spilled yet.

But stay with me...

Because no matter how big your dreams... and how critical public speaking is to achieving them... nothing can hurtle heebie-jeebies down your spine like the thought of...

“A Mob Of Total Strangers Staring You Up And Down”

Note the vivid word pictures I'm creating with these four bullets. They're powerful because we've all been there before, sat in an audience, bored out of our minds. Become a mental collector of "shared experiences" like these.

Before you know it you're...

- Forgetting your place... as someone leans into their neighbor to whisper, "Does this idiot know what they're doing?!"
- Running over time and getting the evil eye from people with places to be...
- Struggling to think on your feet as the awkward silence drags on...
- Losing your audience's interest as people gawk blankly out of the nearest window...

Leaving you staring at the ceiling in bed that night...

Sure you're about to watch your world unravel as word of your miserable showing spreads faster than a California wild fire.

It's no pretty picture... and if you're asking...

Could this nightmare come true for me?

I've gotta tell you...

Another all-encompassing qualifying statement. Telling every reader that Lisa can help them.

From my experience working with speakers from a wide range of skill levels and backgrounds... odds are, you'll do just fine. Probably far better than you think. Largely because you're about to discover...

"Why Nerves Are Actually GOOD..."

First of all... They're perfectly natural.

Even pro's have them before they speak. So, if you've got a nagging feeling your presentation could go up in flames... you're in great company!

The good news is...

Like turning lemons into lemonade... you can effortlessly turn your nerves into 'ready to go' excitement. The secret is a slight change in mindset you can learn in five minutes or less.

Validate your reader's feelings as "normal". In this case, even "pro's" feel the same way.

The more reliable and consistent you are in fulfilling your promises, the more people trust you. Hence the use of this sentence as I tease the rest of the story.

So any nerves you're feeling now... or expect to feel as your presentation nears... you'll need. Because you'll be turning them into the positive energy you need to painlessly glide through your presentation.

It may sound funny... but I can show you how to do this because... as feisty as they could be... I didn't give up on my high-school students.

I had a responsibility to fulfill to them and I'm glad I followed through because what happened next almost floored me...

And it taught me a lesson I've never forgotten.

Anytime you need to be at complete peace eyeball-to-eyeball with a slew of unfamiliar faces...

You'd better know what I call

"The Essential Skills"

Or, in other words, how to...

- Plan your presentation so audience members can't help but nod along in agreement.
- Make your message stick with people for weeks after you've triumphantly packed up and gone home.
- Prepare to face an audience so it's almost impossible to lose your place.
- Recycle anxiety into revved-up excitement so you are in total control and not riddled with nerves.
- Breathe correctly so your voice is steely strong as it effortlessly fills the room.
- Stop feeling self-conscious about the way you look or sound so you can relax and be comfy in your own skin.

Notice how these "Essential Skills" bullets are benefits in disguise.

Don't have these essential skills down already?

It's not your fault.

No-one is born knowing how to steady their pulse as a sea of eyes sear a hole right through them.

Working in wording like this creates a sense of urgency to act.

In fact, what's so frustrating is...

"It's As Easy As 1-2-3 Yet They Don't Teach It In School..."

Consider how critical public speaking is to a successful career and it's a sin these essential skills aren't given the same attention as math and science.

So when you're in a rush to get better at public speaking – where do you turn?

One option is to attend Toastmasters meetings.

In fact, I gave a presentation at a Toastmasters conference as part of my research to put together the step-by-step course I've got for you today.

Toastmaster clubs serve as terrific practice audiences before you take your presentation to a 'real world' audience.

A quick warning though: real world audiences are often a world away from a supportive Toastmaster's group.

In fact, you may know this from experience, but some real world audience members can behave like they were raised by wolves...

"They Interrupt You... They Answer Their Cell Phone... They Loudly Rehash Last Night's Game With Their Neighbor..."

Sad fact is... don't know what you're doing and these rogue audience members can get in your head and mercilessly chop down your composure.

Suddenly you're losing your place... forgetting what you wanted to say next... tripping over your tongue...

Falling apart for all to see.

But this won't be you.

I've just spent a few lines getting the reader jumpy about audience behavior. When you use fear, don't go overboard. Make a fast turn to positive. And that's what this short sentence begins.

Word choice again. Could have chosen "rude", "difficult" or "impolite". However, "rogue" conjures up a legit menace you need protection from.

Telling the reader this course wasn't thrown together. And the Toastmasters speech was just "part" of the research.

This is in an effort to ever increase the perceived value of the course. So when I reveal the price, it'll be viewed as a steal.

I'm going to show you how to quickly 'tame' unruly, rude or even combative audience members. Giving you the tools you need to survive your presentation without interruptions or worse.

But back to your options...

Where else can you turn to learn the essential public speaking skills you need?

You could journey out to a public speaking workshop.

Notorious for their four-figure entrance fees, you can definitely get some solid coaching in some of the essential skills from these events.

And don't overlook acting classes.

Although it's always best to be yourself when you're giving a presentation, acting coaches often share great relaxation techniques to help lose your inhibitions and really go for broke.

Living in Santa Barbara, California, less than 2 hours from the famous Hollywood sign, I know these essential skills are being taught today in some of the more prestigious and costly acting classes. So...

Here's what this means to you:

The skills you need to get great audience reactions are being taught. But it's almost like they are a secret because before now no-one has taken the time to organize them all into one focused step-by-step course.

And like I said, these skills, crucial as they are to getting ahead in life, should be readily available to the masses. That's why, as you'll soon see...

"I'm Leaving Price Gouging To The Oil Companies!"

But I'm getting ahead of myself. Let's take a step back just so we're on the same page.

Critical paragraph. Gives the "reasons why" behind the hook of the letter, that there's a secret shortcut to confident public speaking.

Note how the secrets aren't being taught in any old acting classes. They're being shared in "prestigious" and "costly" classes. Another effort to up the perceived value of the product in the reader's eyes.

You are going to be learning how to bring any audience around to your way of seeing things. And make no mistake... this is an awesome power to hold and it's not for everybody.

Not everyone is cut out to lead.

But if you are a leader already, or you feel like a coveted leadership position is within your grasp, then it's hard not to agree...

“Leaders Can't Avoid Public Speaking No Presentations... No Perks!”

Take it as gospel:

Leaders...

... take home more pay

... wield more sway

... and enjoy their jobs more than their followers.

But the perks of being top-dog only come to those who decide to take action and learn how to wrap an audience around their pinky finger.

Take Martha, the President of a local organisation who called on me to help her ready a big speech... and one espresso shot of the essential skills later...

Do your best to flow seamlessly from body copy to testimonial copy.

See how this line flows into the headline of the next testimonial below.

Note how the testimonials have headlines for scanners.

“You Could Hear A Pin Drop. I Was Told By Many This Was The Best Installation Speech In Over 10 Years!”

"I am racing again this morning but want to stop and reflect on my experience working with you on my Junior League installation speech.

I was a mess, in terms of having abstract ideas, and you were able to clearly steer me in a positive direction.

By all accounts, sustainers, outgoing active Junior League members, and young Gen Yers... my speech inspired them and made them proud to be a Junior Leaguer.

I didn't cry and the entire room was truly engaged. You could hear a pin drop. I was told by many this was the best installation speech in over 10 years!

I have you to thank, Lisa, since you helped me to focus on my audience and you helped me to package delivery for high impact".

~ Martha Townsend, Principal, Market Ready Rx and Junior League of Santa Barbara President, Santa Barbara, CA

Bringing out the "lifetime value" of buying the course.

Martha's results are typical when you know the essential skills.

And the boost in confidence isn't fleeting.

These skills are yours forever. Carry them in your back pocket your entire life. Whip them out as needed to persuade and influence important people.

And if public speaking is a part of your job you can't avoid... or crucial to promoting your business or a special cause you strongly believe in... it's vital to take action and get these skills down now, rather than wait until it's too late.

So one thing is for sure...

A shortcut, right about now, would be a godsend.

That's why...

“I’ve Put Together A Step-By-Step Course That Makes It Easy For You To Stand Granite Strong In Front Of Any Audience And Give A Barn-Burning Presentation...”

Introducing...

“The 7-Week Shortcut To Public Speaking Confidence”

Right after you introduce your product, give a powerful summation of it's main benefits.

A proven cheat-sheet to deeply connecting with any audience... turning them into fast friends... and most importantly... actually relaxing and enjoying yourself!

Here's how it works:

You'll open each of the seven modules with one click and start getting into that week's essential speaking skill at your own pace.

Seven weeks is the ideal time-frame to spend soaking in the essential skills, but if you have a presentation looming just hours or days from now then I've got your back...

Word choice. Bad things "loom" and I want the reader to see Lisa as their savior from a presentation nightmare.

I've designed the course so, if you need to, you can whiz through the easy-to-follow modules in one intense burst. Or jump right in at any point you need the most help.

Even if you only focus 20 to 30 minutes on each essential skill you will come out the other end confident if someone asks you to say a few words out-of-nowhere you won't be found wanting.

Here's a taste of what you'll discover in the course...

- The fascinating secret to ensuring your audience gets a crucial point. When you put this into practice people will pin their ears back like you're about to reveal who really shot JFK!
- What audience members you should seek out like Tony Soprano sniffing out a snitch. When you find them (and they're easy to spot) these folk will keep your head in a happy place from your first word thru your last.

When you use a pop culture reference, make sure it's nothing obscure. In this example and the "Titanic" bullet below, the vast majority of people know the premise of The Sopranos and have likely seen Titanic.

- The powerful new mindset you must embrace to stand a snowball's chance of becoming a popular speaker.
- 4 public speaking "rules" everybody crows about, but I say "trash 'em!" Old-school public speaking coaches think I'm nuts telling you this... but this is 2009 after all!
- What do you do with your hands? The answer will surprise you. I'll show you how to use your hands to cement your message and be comfortable throughout your presentation.
- Some speakers cling to this piece of wood like Leonardo DiCaprio at the end of Titanic. I'll tell you why being brave and letting go will dramatically boost your odds of a standing-o

Don't be afraid to give your marketing some personality. You can do it, in part, by using informal language and slang. In this one bullet you've got "crows about"... "trash 'em" and "nuts". Nothing too edgy about these examples, but it still gives the copy more of a human "friend talking to friend" type feel.

Lisa, stop right there. I'm in.

A "damaging admission". It puts the offer on a down-to-earth footing in the reader's mind. And fights off the feeling that this may all be too good to be true.

NEW* VIDEO COACHING E-COURSE UPGRADE

Since I first offered The 7-Week Shortcut to Public Speaking Confidence I've made some major improvements...

Biggest being, I've added video coaching.

No gorgeous backdrops or fancy graphics. Just me in my home office giving you meaty public speaking tips and tricks to accompany each of the step-by-step week-long modules.

But that's not the only upgrade I've made.

"The Fast Way To Public Speaking Confidence Just Got Even Faster!"

I used to deliver a new module via e-mail every week. Even if you were chomping at the bit to dive into the next week's module you had to wait a full 7 days. Well, not anymore.

When you order I'll give you a special link to download the entire seven week course all at once so you can put it to work for you at your own pace.

Want to zip through it in days, not weeks? Now you can.

Fact is though, even before I made these obvious upgrades I was hearing praise for The 7-Week Shortcut to Public Speaking Confidence like this...

Got a product you've given an upgrade? It's a perfect excuse to use a sentence like this one. Even BEFORE the upgrades people were saying nice things about you.

“It All Just Made Sense! I’m Now Looking Forward To My Presentation Next Week...”

Thank you so much Lisa for your expertise; You have a great talent for communication and it just all made sense!

It's an effective tool which helps you to face your fears and take action.

I'm now looking forward to my presentation next week. Your course is very smart and useful and I will recommend it to everyone around me!

~ Valerie Parizeault, Graphic Designer-Illustrator
-Jewelry Designer, Montreal, Quebec, Canada

Even Barbra, who's been public speaking for over 15 years was surprised by how many “how-to” tips she didn't already know...

This is to sink the
"I've seen it all before" objection floating through the reader's head.

“If I Had Never Presented To An Audience Before I Would Feel Well Prepared After Taking This Course...”

I've been a public speaker for over 15 years and felt I had a good grasp of what makes a good presentation until I took Lisa's 7-Week Shortcut To Public Speaking Confidence course!

I now know there were some important points I was missing. What stood out for me at first was her explanation of what a public speaker really is. It's much more than making a speech to an audience.

You clearly and thoroughly covered every aspect of public speaking in an easy to follow format. This is a course suitable for anyone from any walk of life.

If I had never presented to an audience before I would feel well prepared after taking this course.

~ Barbara Desmarais, Parenting and Life Coach,
Vancouver, BC, Canada

And like Barbara, it doesn't matter if you're an experienced veteran or completely new to public speaking...

Get ready to discover how to...

- Adjust like a fish to water to different speaking venues. All thanks to a Hollywood secret that's made Steven Spielberg millions!
- Lose this from your presentation... unless you want your presentations known around town as natural sleeping aids.

Playing off the fear of being humiliated and embarrassed.

- A powerful visualization Tiger Woods and other peak performers use before they stand center stage. This will have you gripping your microphone with the same steely confidence that Tiger swings his nine-iron...
- Avoid “Death By PowerPoint” by putting only one idea on each slide and making things extra-easy to understand. Other death defying PowerPoint tips await you when you open up your e-course.
- 2 fool-proof methods of recovering when something goes wrong. These reputation-saving secrets will protect you from embarrassment in front of the very people you want to persuade and impress.

One way to give life to a boring topic is to invent a new name for it.

“Very Straightforward”

I found the course very straightforward, conversational and accessible.

~ Wendy Aracich, Owner/Designer Circle Circle Dot Dot

“It’s Actually Fun!”

As someone who makes educational presentations every day, I really needed help structuring my programs.

Lisa’s course helped me learn how to single out a clear objective and let that steer my presentations.

Lisa’s public speaking course is comprehensive and straightforward... and it’s actually fun!

~ Kari Mansager, Assistant Director,
UCSB Women’s Center, Santa Barbara, CA

Lisa, say no more. Let’s do this!

To sell the value of one-on-one coaching I've employed an "extreme makeover" metaphor anyone with a TV set can instantly understand and relate to.

“Wow! – Was That Really You Up There...”

You've marveled like everyone else at those 'makeover' TV shows. Someone teams up with a proven fitness expert and sooner than they ever expect, everyone is cheering their remarkable results.

Opening the door to new opportunities and a whole new level of self-esteem and confidence...

And this is important because I'm not done. I want to sweeten the pot even further. By offering you the chance to get on a private phone line with me and put our heads together to shape you into a lean, mean, speaking machine!

Because...

“The Goal Isn't Some Fleeting Boost In Confidence...

It's Much More Than That!

You're Going To Scratch Public Speaking Off
Your Worry-List Today... Tomorrow... Forever!”

Which is why...

...For a limited time I'm offering you the option of one-on-one coaching alongside your purchase of The 7-Week Shortcut To Public Speaking Confidence

Choose the one-on-one coaching option and connect with me for two eye-opening thirty-minute coaching calls.

I won't hold anything back. Look forward to a couple fascinating phone calls you'll draw on for confidence and inspiration for many years to come. I'll draw on every minute of my 16 years of experience to help make your next presentation a smashing success.

I love my coaching clients. Meet Kalia, who made great strides early into our coaching sessions...

Future pacing. Taking the reader into a bright future where they are enjoying the benefits of Lisa's one-on-one coaching.

“The Coaching Greatly Exceeded
My Expectations... I Improved
By Leaps And Bounds In Just One
Series Of Sessions”

"You're fantastic! The coaching greatly exceeded my expectations, and I improved by leaps and bounds in just one series of sessions.

I learned how to be more effective as a speaker and how to use PowerPoint slides that people enjoy.

I gained a better understanding of what the audience wants, got much better at using my particular talents, and learned what it takes to have a great overall presentation. I received wonderful feedback from the audience and am inspired to continue speaking! Thank you!"

*~ Kalia Rork, Realtor, Prudential California Realty
Santa Barbara, CA"*

Lisa, I want these kind of results too. Let's do this.

And like Kalia, you are going to receive one-on-one coaching that will leave you feeling really listened to... and believe me... I won't even think about offering advice or suggestions until I fully understand your unique situation.

Barbra will back me up on this...

I'm using testimonials to prove a point I'm making in the body copy. If they were all placed in one mindless block they wouldn't be anywhere near as powerful.

“I Appreciated Your Non-Judgemental Attitude”

I felt very comfortable as I relate best to down-to-earth people with positive energy. I appreciated your non-judgmental attitude and willingness to be open to my specific needs.

~ Barbra Mousouris, Wedding Minister/Premarital Counselor, Santa Barbara, CA

And here's two more women I'd like you to meet... Mikki and Angela, who've both been a blast to work with...

“Outstanding Public Speaking Coach”

Lisa is an outstanding public speaking coach who lifted my performance to the next level.

~ Mikki Reilly, Fitness Transform, Santa Barbara, CA

Note how I'm just using first names. This infers that there's genuine friendship behind the coaching relationship. I want the reader to start seeing themselves forming their own unique bond with Lisa.

“Helpful And Valuable”

I really found the coaching experience helpful and valuable.

Just brainstorming and talking helped me become more clear about my ideas and where I hoped to go with my public speaking.

~ Angela Wurtzel, Marriage and Family Therapist,
Santa Barbara, CA

Angela and Mikki have no regrets about partnering with me for one-on-one attention and you won't either... especially since we can work together on whatever you want.

Want to work on...

...feeling less nervous

...being more yourself

...nailing down a powerful message

It's your call.

For instance,

I can help you create a presentation from scratch, or improve an existing one.

As part of my research to put together The 7-Week Shortcut to Public Speaking Confidence I asked my blog readers what they would want help with if we had some one-on-one coaching time.

They were quick to respond...

“improve my ability to use stories and humor”

Social proof in action. If Lisa has responsive blog readers she must be an authority in her field.

“...help me speak well during a meeting”

“...help me organize my thoughts so they come out fluently”

“...work on improving my voice, gestures, and pace”

“...help me present complex ideas in a simple way”

“...help me feel more confident in front of big audiences”

What we work on really is up to you and your unique needs.

And one more thing...

Don't be surprised if I reach out to you a couple weeks after we connect via phone... I'm a sucker for success stories and I'll be dying to hear yours.

“However, Don't Get Too Excited.
This Offer Isn't For Everybody...”

Here's why...

I'm drawing on hundreds of successful presentations I've given to audiences large and small over 16 years. I'm still out on the road giving presentations all the time...

An important promise of after sale support, even friendship, couched in the presupposition that the reader will have a success story to share.

“Here I am giving a seminar... can you tell I'm in my element?”

I love sharing what works with people desperate for a positive audience response.

However, like a frustrated football coach whose players aren't following his well-hatched game plan... sometimes people happily pay for my advice... but don't act on it.

Which, of course, does a disservice to their time and mine.

So if you're more likely to analyze the game plan we agree on, rather than act on that game plan, then it's likely the one-on-one coaching option isn't for you. And if that's the case you shouldn't select it.

But if you are ready to take action then don't sit on the pot on this, because unfortunately there are only...

“Limited One-On-One Coaching Slots Available”

I'll explain why in a moment.

First though, let's talk 'price'. You knew the proven public speaking help I'm offering today wasn't going to come cheap... but I bet when I tell you how much this is going to cost it'll be a pleasant surprise.

Addressing the price issue lurking in the reader's mind. And keeping them reading with the promise of a pleasant surprise.

But first let me ask you...

What would it be worth to finally become a master communicator... capable of winning any audience over to your way of seeing things?

$10,000? $20,000? 30 grand?

Over the course of your career, that's probably a low-ball estimate.

But don't worry. This won't cost you $30,000. Not when less expensive options exist to boost your public speaking confidence.

Attending a public speaking workshop, for one.

You've seen those fancy touring workshops which go from city to city... asking $3,000 a ticket! It's less than $30,000 for sure, but still a fat check to sign over.

So we already know you are not going to pay $10,000. That's out of the question. And the $3,000 to attend a touring workshop is certainly a steep investment.

Like I said earlier, I want to finally make the essential skills readily accessible to everyone. That's why...

Repeating the "reason why" just before revealing the bargain price. If someone is price hunting, they'll still know the "reason why" I've elaborated on elsewhere in the copy.

You can currently claim your copy of The 7-Week Shortcut to Public Speaking Confidence for only $97. But be warned: this price is part of a marketing test I have underway. The results will be in soon and if I don't like them I'll start testing a new higher price I have in mind.

But I'm not done yet...

When you claim your copy of The 7-Week Shortcut to Public Speaking Confidence you can also secure one of the limited one-on-one coaching slots I have available for only $70 more.

I'd normally charge $125 (my going hourly rate) for the solid hour of attention I'll give to easing your public speaking concerns. But for purchasing The 7-Week Shortcut to Public Speaking Confidence I want to extent you this special $70 rate.

However, my generosity comes with a small catch...

In return, all I ask is you write a short testimonial after your next presentation – as other clients on this page have happily done – documenting the audience responses you're enjoying.

Jump on this quick, though. I can only book so many one-on-one coaching sessions before my schedule gets too hectic and my husband has to send out a search team!

Do I know what my "close it down" number is yet? I don't. But I'll sure know it when I hit it... and I'll immediately have to shut the doors on the one-on-one coaching option until things ease up.

If you are still on the fence (even though I'm truly giving away the farm here) see if my 'can't lose' guarantee give you the peace of mind to act now before it's too late and someone takes your place.

Lisa, you're virtually giving this away. Count me in.

I've done enough selling to feel comfortable taking a shot at a mini-"close"

Asking a small favor of the reader to combat the feeling of this being "too good to be true".

The, send me a testimonial "catch", works well when you have other testimonials to show off.

Real Results Or Your Money Back...

I'm going way beyond normal 30, 60, or 90 day guarantees and putting you in a totally 'no-lose' position.

365 Days... An Entire Year
To Change Your Mind...
My Risk-Free Guarantee...

If you don't feel a tremendous upsurge in public speaking confidence after you put The 7-Week Shortcut to Public Speaking Confidence to work for you. And especially after our one-on-one coaching sessions, I'm going to give you a full 100% refund.

You can even keep The 7-Week Shortcut to Public Speaking Confidence for your troubles!

Simply contact me anytime at lisa@coachlisab.com during the coming year. There will be no fuss, no awkward conversations. I'll just give you your money back... 'no-questions-asked' as they say.

Obviously, I'm sticking my neck out but that's because I want you to be sure you can order with no danger of doing something you can't go back on.

LB

You're right. Someone could easily rip me off with a guarantee this bighearted.

It's true. They could.

But I'm not losing sleep about it. You can see from my testimonials that I tend to leave people delighted with their coaching experience and buzzing with confidence.

The actions of a couple unsavory characters won't budge me an inch from making your purchase totally risk-free.

So what do you say... Ready to get started?

When you've just taken all the risk off their shoulders, it's time to go for a "close".

It's obvious how committed you are to becoming a confident public speaker by reading this far.

The next step is to choose option 1 or 2 from below and I'll guide you from there...

OPTION 1

[*The 7-Week Shortcut to Public Speaking Confidence
With One-on-One Coaching*](#)

OPTION 2

[*The 7-Week Shortcut to Public Speaking Confidence
Without One-on-One Coaching*](#)

Not sure you've got what it takes?

Join the club. My client list is chock-full of people who didn't think they could ever be cool as a cucumber with a hundred eyes laser focused on them.

Now these same folk fearlessly face down any audience, no matter the size... no matter how many 'big wigs' are in attendance.

They can't be psyched out.

They can't be intimidated.

Their new skills free them to be themselves and actually have fun with public speaking. And here's your chance to join them. Select option 1 or 2 and we can get started.

If they've not ordered yet it could be because they don't believe they have it in them to be a good public speaker.

This question openly hits that objection head on.

Going on to describe how others who felt the exact same way have gone on to success.

OPTION 1

The 7-Week Shortcut to Public Speaking Confidence With One-on-One Coaching

OPTION 2

The 7-Week Shortcut to Public Speaking Confidence Without One-on-One Coaching

You do not need a PayPal account to order. Your order will be processed through the same secure-server PayPal uses to securely process thousands of eBay transactions everyday.

PayPal accepts all major credit/debit cards.

You will receive an e-mail asking you to verify your e-mail address. You must complete this simple step to receive your e-course.

Don't just hope the reader will "Imagine This"... follow up with further instruction.

“Imagine This...”

Go there in your mind and feel how much peace could sweep through you if you knew public speaking would be no biggie for the rest of your life.

If for the first time ever... you could watch an audience file into the room and feel energized... not fearful.

And why not...

You know what you are going to say.

You know how you're going to say it.

You know your audience is going to eat it up.

Gently... you squeeze the microphone... draw in a soothing breath...

And you're off...

Flowing from one well-made point to the next. And you look out to your audience and all you see is friendly faces... nodding along... silently enjoying every second of your presentation.

And you know what...

“The Eyes Don't Lie... You've Connected!”

And when you repeat this over and over...

When making winning presentations becomes a habit... your business, your career will naturally leapfrog to another level. Not to mention all the nights of broken sleep you'll save yourself.

But breakthroughs this big only happen when you make the decision to act.

I don't want to be too dramatic, but it strikes me this could be one of those moments. One of those rare times when you come to a fork in the road and have to go one way or the other.

Downplaying the hypey feel of creating a fork in the road, lets me do exactly that without seeming over the top.

So your choice is simple...

You can keep doing what you're doing.

Roll the dice and hope over time you can become a better public speaker on your own.

And if you choose that path I sincerely hope you get where you want to go.

Or... you can get where you want to go faster – much faster than you might ever get there on your own.

I've made it easy.

Laying out the essential skills for you in the clearest English I know.

Building to a finish so it's time to reinforce the speed and ease of your solution.

On top of that we can connect on the phone for an hour of one-on-one coaching.

Who knows what I'll be able to share with you which could make your next presentation a smash. But I can't order for you. That's something you've got to do yourself.

It's nothing you can't go back on if you need to. My guarantee makes it practically impossible this can't work out well.

Reach for what's possible. I'll be there beside you, supporting you every step of the way.

Hammer home the guarantee in the final push to turn browsers into buyers.

OPTION 1

[The 7-Week Shortcut to Public Speaking Confidence
With One-on-One Coaching](#)

OPTION 2

[The 7-Week Shortcut to Public Speaking Confidence
Without One-on-One Coaching](#)

You do not need a PayPal account to order. Your order will be processed through the same secure-server PayPal uses to securely process thousands of eBay transactions everyday.

PayPal accepts all major credit/debit cards.

You will receive an e-mail asking you to verify your e-mail address. You must complete this simple step to receive your e-course.

Whoops!

Almost forgot to tell you what happened with my high-school students.

Well, slowly... I began making headway.

Looking back I clearly see what was happening...

I was picking up the very same essential skills you'll be learning today through some pretty turbulent trail-and-error.

And it changed everything...

I started...

Connecting with more audience members.

Relaxing.

Being 100% myself.

And they were showing me respect.

Bringing Lisa's story to a climax by mirroring the exact benefits the reader can grasp by acting today.

I was finally getting through to them and...

“It Felt Fantastic”

Years later... I look back at that time as the turning point where I 'figured out' public speaking and was able to go on to enjoy an exciting and rewarding career where I've given hundreds of persuasive presentations.

We make sense of our lives by identifying "turning points". This paragraph, although written in Lisa's voice, is designed to be internalized by the reader... taking them into a future where they look back at buying this course as a momentous turning point.

But don't get me wrong. You can probably tell... I'm no self-important 'guru'. I never planned on being in this position.

I speak out about the essential skills because I know how quickly they changed my life... and I've seen first-hand how they've skyrocketed the confidence of my coaching clients.

And now, today... it's your turn.

What are you waiting for?

This could be exactly what you need right now.

Grab this opportunity while it lasts. Act now and click option 1 or 2.

To your next great audience response,

Don't chicken out. Make an aggressive call to action.

LB

Lisa Braithwaite, M.A.

Countering a big objection in a reader's mind. Especially important if a reader has scrolled down and is reading the P.S.'s before any body copy.

P.S. You don't need special 'speaking genes' for this to work for you. What I'll share with you works for anybody with the will to succeed because it's so simple and step-by-step.

P.S.S. Missed my 365 day guarantee? The short of it: You can't lose. I'm sticking my neck out to ensure there's no possible way this can't work out well for you.

P.S.S.S. Any delay in taking action could squish any chance you've got of snagging one of the limited one-on-one coaching slots.

Can you afford to let an opportunity this unique to slip through your fingers and into someone else's lap? Here's those options one last time.

OPTION 1

[The 7-Week Shortcut to Public Speaking Confidence
With One-on-One Coaching](#)

OPTION 2

[The 7-Week Shortcut to Public Speaking Confidence
Without One-on-One Coaching](#)

Ugly as it may be, our ego's don't like to see others get ahead as we're left behind. This sentence taps into this fear as a final attempt to spur action.

You do not need a PayPal account to order. Your order will be processed through the same secure-server PayPal uses to securely process thousands of eBay transactions everyday.

PayPal accepts all major credit/debit cards.

You will receive an e-mail asking you to verify your e-mail address.

Stripped Naked Letter #2 is an example of “cash-on-demand” copywriting.

It works like this:

You take a slice of your life... and use it as an honest excuse to pull in a windfall of revenue by offering a one-off discount on your product or service.

Before you see how I did it in the next sales letter, a few years back I saw it put into masterful action by copywriter and internet marketer Ray Edwards.

Ray’s wife had her eye on a Honda Element. Ray wanted her to have it. But the money wasn’t in the budget at the time.

So Ray turned to the power of “cash-on-demand” copywriting...

Over a couple of e-mails he told his readers about his wife’s desire for these new wheels. And how, to get it for her, he’d be willing, for a limited time, to take on new copywriting clients at a discounted rate.

What happened?

His wife got her ride. And by sharing a slice of his life, Ray further humanized and endeared himself to his list. Plus, the new clients he took on turned, long-term, into almost $200,000 of income.

Of course, this cash-on-demand technique can be tailored to almost any product or service. You can use it in e-mails, or in sales letter form as I did.

Here’s a few tips on how to make it work...

1) Make an irresistible offer.

Anything less than a truly meaningful discount on your product or service runs the risk of blunting response. Work out a sweet spot that allows you to make as much as you can while giving your reader a deal he can’t walk past with a right mind.

2) Make it about them, not you.

Uncomfortable truth or not, your reader couldn’t give two salami sticks what predicament you’re in. He wants to know how your problem is his opportunity. If that’s not quickly apparent, he’ll bolt.

Avoid this by taking breaks from your story to swing into strong “YOU” based sales copy. I do this in the letter, so look out for it.

3) Go strong on specifics.

This gives your offer a ring of truthfulness.

In the letter you’re about to read, you’ll spot how I give various specifics... a company name, a website address. All true... and designed to let the reader know this isn’t some contrived way to get them to part with their cash.

However, if you’re a very private person there’s no need to divulge your entire life.

Note what I didn’t include: My son’s name. My wife’s name. The hospital and city the encounter took place. You don’t need to include everything. Just enough to convey a ring of truth throughout the letter.

4) If you’re using sales letter form, use your “above-the-fold” to state your problem in a compelling way, but still make clear what’s in it for the reader...

Here’s some quick examples...

“Rising College Tuition Fees Mean If I Don’t Offer
You The Deal Of The Century, My Son
(And His Shoot ‘Em Up Video Games) Will Move Back In!”

Notre Dame’s controversial fee increases are killing me... so to protect the tranquil home life of my husband and I... here’s me thinking why not give you a chance to pick up Product XYZ for hundreds less than it’s normal price.

“Daughter Guilt-Trips Powerless Dad Into Ponying Up For European Choir Tour...”

What’s a Dad to do? The deadline for payment is Thursday.
Then it hit me... a one-time sale on my most popular service...

When The Trip Organizer Told Me The Fast Approaching Deadline For South Africa 2010 Bookings, I Told Him...

“Looks Like The Only Way I’m World Cup Bound Is If I Make My Readers An Offer They Can’t Refuse...

I’ve been invited to join a group of fans adventuring to South Africa to witness World Cup 2010 in person! Who could pass that up? But to make it I need some quick cash to pay my way. So how about we make this a you scratch my back,
I’ll scratch yours kinda thang...

And what if, until I’ve claimed my flight to Capetown, I give you my complete package of training videos, replete with my usual guarantee, for less than a pair of soccer cleats?

That’s just a few examples. Keep your eyes open in your own life for legit “reasons why” you can spin into one-off promotions like these.

O.K, here’s my own take on cash-on-demand sales copy. It’s a promotion I ran on the Warrior Forum, a popular internet marketing discussion board.

I’m happy to say, even though I launched this promo over the Thanksgiving holiday, all three slots were snatched up faster than dark-meat on a buffet table.

Using word choice to establish the theme of the letter right off the bat.

Amazing Warrior Special Offer Is Born As...

"Wife Gives Copywriter Husband No Joke Ultimatum..."

"Honey, Buy These Beautiful Baby Photos Now... Or Sleep On The Couch Forever!"

The baby photos taken in our cramped and sterile hospital room were never supposed to turn out this good!

Now I'm on the hook for $600 I didn't budget for...

Which means YOU get to grab this almost unbelievable WSO...

Help me cover a small portion of what I owe and I'll craft you the killer autoresponder sales copy you need to

So far this letter has been about me. But with their mental radio tuned non-stop to WIFM (What's In It For Me)... readers couldn't care less. That's why this is bolded and the "YOU" capitalized. I want the reader in no doubt this letter is about them.

kick sales into high gear...

From The Desk of Ross Bowring, Direct Response Copywriter (And Proud New Dad...)

Dear Fellow Warrior,

"There's no obligation, right?"

Bringing people into the action with punchy dialogue. No dull backstory. No couple paragraphs to warm up.

That's what I asked when a teenage girl swung by my wife's hospital room last Thursday with a professional Canon camera dangling around her neck.

"No..."

Letting the reader know valuable business building info awaits if they keep reading. Always make your marketing valuable where possible.

But she knew something I didn't.

She's freakin' Anne Geddes in disguise!

Because, fact is, she didn't just take awesome photos of my wife and our new son. She also had a marketing masterplan up her sleeve. A simple plan of action any savvy warrior can follow to spark an eruption of cashflow.

I'll tell you how this teenage evil-genius has me by the balls to shovel out $600 a.s.a.p, but first I want you to know this one-time only WSO is all about YOU...

Your profits...

Teasing the scarcity to come. The more scarce something is, the more valuable it becomes.

Your vision of hoards of cash-buyers becoming ever so real...

And most importantly, how...

Making the reader imagine the benefit of taking me up on this offer.

You're About To Grab The Autoresponder Sales Copy You Need To Hurtle Buyers To Your Site With Wallets Wide Open...

Hi. My name is Ross Bowring...

But don't toss me the keys to your marketing and let me sup up your sales engine just yet.

You've likely never seen my name before... let alone seen me as the guy who'll turn your new autoresponder series into a round-the-clock cash-cow.

And until today... there's no reason you should have. In fact, if you're thinking I can write a bit and wondering why you've never heard of me, then you're in elite company...

Working a benefit into this part of the copy. Always be weaving in benefits at every stage of your letter.

"The Real Deal... I Couldn't Believe I Hadn't Heard Of Him Before..."

When Ross Bowring approached me, desperate to enter my coaching program... I told him as I tell each prospective student that my program isn't for everyone. The vast majority of those who want to sign up, I pass on.

I asked him to submit a couple samples to prove he has what it takes to one day be great.

On reading those two samples I knew Ross was the real deal. I couldn't believe I hadn't heard of him before.

He's not only tons better than others at his level, but he's future top-shelf material. And... if he continues to progress as quickly as he has been, the future is going to come very quickly for Ross.

Get him now before it's too late.

Vin Montello
The Godfather Of Persuasion
MontelloMarketing.com

You could say I've been eagerly waiting behind the scenes. Getting good on the quiet. Prepped to crash the copywriting party with a rubberneck worthy bang.

To date, it's worked. Folk I've great respect for have taken notice...

I don't want the reader to scan past the Kevin Rogers testimonial below. So I lead them into it with this...

"This Offer Is Just Ridiculous..."

I critique a lot of copy from up-and-coming writers and I can honestly say Ross is one the best guys on the scene right now. And this offer is just ridiculous. I'm tempted to buy up all 3 spots myself, but that would defeat the purpose of you finding out how good this guy really is.

Kevin Rogers
Head Writer, John Carlton's Stable of Copywriters

Continuing the baby theme of the letter.

With endorsements like these from a sales copy superstar like Vin Montello... and from Kevin Rogers, Vin's most famous student and head writer of John Carlton's Stable Of Copywriters... I'd be a few wet-wipes short of a diaper bag if I charged newbie prices.

And my clients aren't complaining for the value they recieve. Just this month I've taken on two clients for sales letters who've been only too happy to pay my mid-four figure fee.

Even so, with a baby on the way, I've had to tighten the purse strings.

Creating a firm "army buddy" bond between me and any reader with kids.

If you've got kids you know how deep you've got to reach in your pockets for strollers... basinets... breast pumps... cribs... clothes... diapers... formula... it's daylight robbery!

Even so, I had our piggy bank fairly secure until last Thursday when I fell victim to a "marketing muggin" I never saw coming...

See... when the baby-faced sales assassin poked her head around the door and flashed her Bella Baby Photography name tag, I knew, if I don't play this right I could be on the hook for a pretty penny.

Still... I Naively Thought I Could Take Her...

After all, I've spent months studying at the feet of the direct response masters... some of the gnarliest "closers" to ever walk the face of God's green earth...

People know you're not perfect. No-one is. You make yourself more "attractive" when you admit to failings.

But that's not all...

I've studied one-on-one with Vin Montello...

That's right. The same guy StomperNet sought out to be their in-house copywriting know-it-all. (Heck, you've got to be a bona fide results-machine to go by the name The Godfather of Persuasion and have no-one bat an eyelid...)

So I'm thinking... there's no sales technique this snap-happy tennager can throw at me that I can't see right through.

I'll just say thanks but no thanks, or worse case scenario... I'll pony up for the cheapest package. Or so I figured. Because an hour after she took our picture, she returned...

Macbook In Hand... Fail-Proof Marketing Plan In Full Effect... And A New Dad Powerless To Stop Her Dastardly Plan To Pillage My Pockets...

She was no dummy...

Using aliteration to promote reading flow. Don't overdo this. You never want to draw attention to your "writing".

She had Marketing 101 down patt. People buy on emotion, not logic. A classic truism of salesmanship too often forgotten... but not by this gotta-get-the-sale girl...

That's why she opened up her Mac... pressed play and launched a slideshow of twenty gorgeous photos, cropped with care, and each as well-taken as the one's you saw above.

Not only that... the slideshow came with such moving music that my wife immediately broke into tears. Draping my arm around her shoulders...

Right Then I Knew... I'd Lost... I'd Need To Buy Every Single Photo Or Be Confined To The Dog House For All Eternity...

That's why... I've got to get these photos.

Right now they're displayed in an on-line gallery.

Take a look if you like... just go to BellaBabyPhotography.com

Offering an extra burden of proof. I doubt if anybody actually went to see the photos. But just giving the link provides people with reason to believe this promotion has a genuine motive behind it.

Differentiate your offer from the tens of other offers people get hit with each day.

Click on View Photos. The password is: 1116landonbowring

You'll see for yourself that this WSO is a slice of very real life. Not the made up nonsense which usually passes as a reason to "act now".

This gallery is on-line until December 3rd. By that point I have to have purchased the photos. I'm told they delete them if you don't show up and buy. I suspect that's marketing smoke 'n' mirrors but I can't take the chance.

Plus... I'm as biased as they come, but they are beautiful photos. Naturally, my wife loves them and after a difficult pregnancy she absolutely deserves them...

So I need to do whatever it takes to get them for her... and truth be told... save myself from hearing an earful from now until kingdom come.

That's why you're about to be very happy about how affordable your new autoresponder copy is going to be...

But let's put the size of your investment aside for a moment and ask what it's worth to you to be able to...

Acknowledging skepticism about the December 3rd deadline. Saying that I share it myself.

Shoot off "hands-free" selling missiles to scores of subscribers...

E-mails which mercilessly pin-point your reader's need for your product...

Making it virtually impossible for them not to re-visit your sales letter with renewed passion to buy... and buy now.

Would that be worth at least $2,000 over the course of a product's lifetime? You bet it would.

Establishing the value of what I'm offering.

But this is a down-to-earth WSO, not a fancy-pants guru launch. You won't be paying $2,000. Nowhere close.

My standard autoresponder fee is $100 per email with a 6 e-mail minimum. So $600 for a killer autoresponder sequence. A steal for what it's worth, but not in the price range of everybody.

But what if, so I can get my hands on these photos, I slash that by half... to $300. That would be a true deal. You'd spring ahead of your competition and grab a bargain in the process.

Reminding the reader, just before I give the bargain price, why I'm willing to give such a steep discount.

However, why stop there... maybe these sleepless nights are stealing my sanity... BUT...

What if I craft you a wickedly persuasive autoresponder sequence of six e-mails for only $200. Like I said, I need $600 to buy the full package of baby photos. So this generous and absolutely one-time offer is only available to 3 clients only. Believe it...

Only Three Savvy Warriors Will Watch In Wonder As I Methodically Seal Subscribers Air-Tight Into Your Sales Funnel...

Here's how to be one of them:

PM me.

About to give very clear, very simple instruction about what to do next.

Tell me about your product or service.

I'll write back, and if I'm interested I'll send you my PayPal address. Obviously, with an offer this generous payment is 100% upfront.

If this WSO has captured your interest more than any other in a long time... if it just seems more genuine than any "marketing" you've read in a while... imagine what a great job I'll do with your autoresponder e-mails.

Go ahead. PM me now and we'll get the ball rolling.

"Obviously", "Naturally", "Of course," "It makes sense that..." All phrasing that appeals to "common sense". A powerful way to get the reader to blindly accept whatever you are about to say.

To your lasting success,

Ross Bowring

P.S. Of course, you can do your best to write these autoresponder e-mails yourself... or you can put your business in the hands of some wet behind the ears wannabee on E-lance. But why would you...

Slating an alternative without bashing anyone in particular.

Especially when you can get your hands on autoresponder copy crafted by someone who knows what they're doing... who takes pride in churning out great work everytime. And this time at a ridiculously low investment.

You've never seen a WSO from me before and you'll likely never again. My clients pay my four-figure rates without blinking. This offer is a one-time abberation. Take advantage of it. PM me now and lift your conversions skywards.

Ross Bowring ©2009

Need a cash-creating sales letter? E-mail me at ross@bowringmarketing.com

Strong call to action with a tied in benefit.

Stripped Naked Letter #3 is a cheeky selection, I must admit...

It's my own sales letter that sells my copywriting and consulting services.

Why am I including this? Isn't it a tad shameless in it's self-promotion?

Of course. But I'm leveling some blame at the open-toed sandals of Frank Kern.

One of the highlights of Frank's Mass Control launch back in the day was when he walked his subscribers through his own sales letter. Pointing out the gnarly persuasion techniques he'd loaded into his sales copy.

For me, as I was in the process of stuffing my brain full of every copy tactic within God's creation, seeing Frank tear his letter apart was a revelation.

And it's why, I think you'll thank me for including my own letter in this report.

Largely because I'm using bucket loads of teaser copy. And crafting good teaser copy is crucial, especially when you're selling information products.

Although you want to make your marketing as valuable as you can to readers, you can't just give away all your info. So the health of your bank balance rests on whether or not you're a good tease.

To help you with this, here's an example of the thinking behind one of the teaser bullets from the letter you're about to read...

The background to it goes like this...

One of the savviest e-mail writers on planet earth is a guy named Randy Gage.

Randy is a network marketing guru. He has a series of how-to' products, and he also travels the globe giving seminars. And most importantly for our purposes, he's also one heck of a writer.

He uses his skills to write his list from various hotspots he's hitting on his globe-trotting tour. And he doesn't fly, eat, or hotel, cheap. Only the best for Mr. Gage. And he shares his James Bond-esque lifestyle with his jealous readers in e-mails he calls Randy's Rants.

Within his Rants he also promotes, subtly and skillfully, a range of products which send him affiliate commissions.

I've been reading and studying his e-mails for years. And he really has some elegant sales tricks up his sleeve.

Now, in my letter, I wanted to tell readers how I can use some of Randy Gage's proven tricks in their own e-mail copy. But I don't want to explain things as I just did to you. It's not snappy enough. I need a shorthand version which arouses curiosity.

One way to do this is to put your finger on one interesting tit-bit of information about what you want to tease. It doesn't even have to be directly associated with the info. For example...

In this case, Randy Gage is infamous for wearing Armani suits. Let's see where that takes us...

So continuing the theme, what if we then say he's "fashioned a unique cash-sucking master plan", which he has... he's discovered how writing his list about his adventures can help pay for a lavish lifestyle.

Since they're written from various exotic haunts around the world, let's call his e-mails, not plain old "e-mails", but "postcards from paradise". And in keeping with the fashion theme, why don't I offer to "expertly tailor" Randy's sales tactics into my reader's e-mail copy.

You see how this all stemmed from creating a theme, or a hook... the fashion connection, and then using that theme to couch the rest of the information I needed to share.

To end up with a bullet like this...

The "Six-Figure" Travellers Check...

A self-confessed Armani addict has fashioned a unique cash-sucking "masterplan" that foots the bill as he writes his list from Vienna one week... Venice Beach the next. I've been devouring his "postcards from paradise" for years and I'll expertly tailor his best buy now tricks throughout your e-mail copy.

Remember: coming up with a hook for bullets like this one is only dependant on you finding one interesting tit-bit out the info you need to tease. Like I did in the above example.

You just need one. Then you draw out the theme with word choices and metaphor throughout the bullet.

When you've read everything and saved this report for reference, you can sign up for Randy Rants yourself at randygage.com (non-affiliate).

Coming up after you wade into this next letter, I'll give you a cheat-sheet of all the dirty-devil tips you've ogled over these three stripped naked letters.

Frustrated Marketers Pin Their Ears Back As...

“Former Stutterer Finally Spits Out The “Sale Closing” Secret Smooth Talking Copywriters Will Never Know!”

“Who’d Have Thunk It...”

A Former Schoolboy Stutterer Reveals The Game-Changing
“New Rule” Of Closing The Sale...

A Profit-Booster He Unknowingly Sat On For 19 Years...

Unaware That One Day Open-Minded Marketers Would Rush Him Love Notes Like This One...

With a bold headline package... you want to acknowledge skepticism right away.

"Conversions Have Shot Up 714%!"

"Before working with Ross, I wasn't getting the results I wanted from my e-course sales page.

Ross came along and shook things up. My conversions have shot up 714%(!) and I'm making more money from the sales letter than ever before.

Besides the great results, Ross was super easy to work with and approached the job as a partnership. He took the time to understand where I was coming from, especially my discomfort with the traditional bombastic sales letter.

He helped me understand the concepts behind the sales letter so that I was never in the dark about where he was going with the content.

And he paid attention to my style and made sure the page reflected my voice and my personality.

In a nutshell: hire Ross and sell more stuff!"

Lisa Braithwaite
Public Speaking Coach and Author
www.coachlisab.com

No Matter Your Product Or Service... As You Read This Letter You'll Quickly See Why YOU Can Be Next To Cash In On This Admittedly Bizarre... Yet Uniquely Powerful Window Into Hidden Human Psychology...

"The Real Deal... I Couldn't Believe I Hadn't Heard Of Him Before..."

A couple months ago I was approached by Ross Bowring. He had heard about my coaching program and desperately wanted in. I told him as I tell each prospective student that my program isn't for everyone. The vast majority of those who want to sign up, I pass on.

I asked him to submit a couple samples to prove he has what it takes to one day be great.

On reading those two samples I knew Ross was the real deal.

I couldn't believe I hadn't heard of him before.

He's not only tons better than others at his level, but he's future top-shelf material. And... if he continues to progress as quickly as he has been, the future is going to come very quickly for Ross.

Get him now before it's too late.

Vin Montello
The Godfather Of Persuasion
MontelloMarketing.com

From Ross Bowring
Direct Response Copywriter & Marketing Consultant
Philadelphia / London

Dear Frustrated Marketer,

Clueless.

That's how you feel when sales sputter.

Countering the thought in marketer's minds that they already know every marketing insight under the sun.

You're in the pitch black asking... what did I miss?

Well, you need to know...

You might not have missed a thing.

At least, nothing obvious...

Because you won't find the "sale closing" secret I want to share with you in any must-read copywriting book...

You won't find it gossiped about on a marketing forum or sneaked into a blog post...

Yet as you read this letter you'll see why you won't just be among the lucky few to know and profit from this secret...

Even better...

You get to gasp as I harness this powerful secret to...

"Take Browsers On A Cable Snappin' Elevator Death-Drop From Your Headline To Your Buy Button..."

Faster than you ever thought possible....

More customers... are buying more products... more often....

And...

"Finally... You Fling Your Arms Around Your Thrilling New Life..."

Hi. Ross Bowring here...

And hard as it might be to believe, being a former stutterer has been a blessing in disguise in my quest to earn the right to be your go-to copywriter.

As you'll discover...

It's given me rare insight into a critical sale-closing secret.

A secret that clients like Alex now thank for an explosion of cash-flow...

"Boosted Our Revenues 582%!"

I'm thrilled to say that one of Ross's marketing ideas boosted our revenues by 582%! It's no overstatement to say we're always looking for an excuse to work with him again.

Alex Lewczuk,
CEO Southside Broadcasting
Middlesbrough, England

Of course, successes like these are a far cry from my stuttering school days. Back then...

"Pig-Tailed Girls Would Mercilessly Giggle Behind Their Books As I'd Fail Miserably To Read Shakespeare Aloud In English Class..."

I can laugh about it with friends now...

Although truth be told, at the time...

I'm lucky to have some great friends. But saying so as an aside like this is subtle social proof. It infers others like, know and trust me.

"To Earn Respect It Felt Like I Had To Work Twice As Hard As Everyone Else..."

Maybe you know that feeling too.

Well... fast forward nineteen years and although I'd long grown out of my stutter...

Relating my story directly to the reader to bond.

As I made the switch from face-to-face sales to becoming a salesman in print... it was almost like being sat back at my graffiti-stained school desk.

Only this time...

"I Was Determined To
Out-Work... Out-Wit... And Out-Hustle
Every Wannabee Copywriter Alive..."

And that meant taking a road less traveled. I'll tell you the extra miles I trekked to stand apart from the "copywriting crowd"...

But make no mistake, this is 100% about YOU...

And most importantly...

How fully you're about to ride the wave of this mind-blowing fact...

In 2008, armies of rabid buyers pushed direct marketing's projected worldwide sales to $2.158 trillion (yes, that's trillion with a "t"!).

Think about that for a moment...

“Claim Even A Razor Thin Slice Of This Trillion Dollar Pie And You Have All You Need To Re-Model Life From The Ground Up...”

And shouldn't you get that chance...

Because even if people are yet to notice, let's not water down the truth...

YOU had the backbone to see yourself as a stand-out success... as others seem content to mesh into the couch-potato masses...

YOU dared picture your product snatched up by throngs of grateful buyers... as others bank their financial future on scratch offs!

YOU found the guts to plunge into shark infested marketing waters... as others dip in a pinky-toe and shriek “Too Dangerous!”

One way to keep people reading is to tease upcoming straight talk.

And you didn't get to be fingertips from success without wading through setbacks.

Perhaps you went with the cheapest copywriter out there. Only to receive a harsh reminder that you get what you pay for.

Now you're too savvy to let sales slip through the cracks...

This time... you know you need to lockdown a copywriter who'll deadbolt all doors.

Someone who'll...

“Turn Your Marketing Into An Alcatraz Where The Only Escape Is Through Your Sales Funnel...”

I'm talking about...

Sales Letters which slap rocket thrusters on your next product launch...

Auto responders which spur stampedes of buyers to your sales letter...

Video marketing which spikes response and turns eyeballs into money in the bank...

Squeeze Pages which stuff soon-to-be buyers onto your list as you sleep...

Direct Mail which sets giant paydays on a permanent cycle of rinse and repeat...

Space Ads which seize busy readers and force them to respond to your offer...

Note how many of the sub-headlines in this letter could just as easily be headlines.

Sub-headlines shouldn't be an afterthought. They should grab scanners by the collar and pull them into your letter.

And whatever sales copy you need to set cash registers singing...

“This Controversial Inside Tip Will Save You The Humiliation Of Being Caught With Your Pants Down On Launch Day!”

Next time a copywriter says they've studied the masters... when you pick up the phone to discuss your project in detail, simply ask them...

That's great... what else have you done?

See... it's nothing unusual to diligently plough through the “must-read” copywriting classics...

Or to devour pricey home-study courses penned by copy kingpins like John Carlton or Clayton Makepeace...

Heck, even to journey out to a copywriting workshop.

Take that road, as most do, and you can become a talented copywriter.

But for me, to set off the flood of orders you deserve, I knew studying the masters had to be just the beginning...

↑ But what a beginning!

“You’ll Never Believe These Little Known Yet Ultra-Profitable Tactics The Direct Response Household Names Use To Shovel Dead Presidents Into Marketer’s Pockets...”

Segmenting myself from the “copywriting crowd”.

This works with most any product. You say what the competition does without bashing anybody. Then make clear how you go above and beyond.

The Dr. Seuss “Sales Exploder”...

Copywriting legend Gary Bencivenga sold thousands of Thanksgiving hams by taking readers back in their mind to childhood “story time”. Your reason to care?

Skillful variations of this tactic work in almost any niche. But be warned: In the wrong hands this “sales exploder” can blow up in your face. Fortunately, I’ve spent weeks studying Gary’s proven playbook so the only explosion will be in available funds next time you visit the ATM. SUPER-ADVANCED TACTIC

↑
Anticipating the reader's non-stop demand to know... what's in it for me?

The Doughnut Shield... Crafting a generous guarantee might be common-sense... yet here’s what even experienced marketers miss: the secret to a guarantee which slashes refunds and rockets sales is not 100% protection. The best guarantees have a small, but unmistakable “doughnut-hole” built in. Remind me when we talk and I’ll let you in on this shirt-saving secret Michael Fortin swears by.

The Bidding Frenzy... Picasso's don't just go for 50 million-large at auction... they also conform to the shock rule-of-thumb Dan Kennedy champions for how sales letters should look. You'll watch your product become "must-own" no-matter-the-price when I put this tested money spinner to work for you.

The 6 Second Delay... Mouths drop at your hidden genius when this John Carlton "attention snagger" puts your launch on warp-speed. Amateurs employ it with reckless abandon... when I've always found the real key to it's profit pulling power is less is more.

The Pull The Rug From Under Ya'... When Vin Montello introduced this never-before-seen "twist in the tale" sales tactic... wild acclaim attracted copycats by the dozen. Fortunately, Vin knew this tactic only cranks open wallets when you first prime your reader for a particular type of shocking surprise.

The "Gossip Girl" Selling System... How did Joe Sugarman unload 20 million pairs of BluBlocker Sunglasses? By putting the heat on prospects to get seriously in-the-know. Use this tactic and...

Transitioning from bullets into a sub-head can ease reading flow.

Readers don't have to exit bullets into an intimidating block of text.

"Suddenly... Prospects Can't Keep Your Name Off Their Lips... Sparking A Word-Of-Mouth Explosion And The Automatic Income You're Jonesing For..."

If I just put these proven tactics to work for you... you'd be well on your way to a website which never stops selling, whatever the time of day.

But why stop there?

Don't tell me you never imagine owning center stage at a seminar...

Playing off a common fantasy among internet marketers. Give thought to what fantasies run through the mind of prospects in your own niche.

Rockin' the laser-pointer like a kid with a light saber... as you reveal to a rapt sea of wanabees... how you took action to create not just a business to proudly call your own... but...

“Your Own Portable Cash-Cow... Picking Up The Tab For A Life Of Reilly Others Can Only Dream Of...”

However, you know and I know...

Cookie-cutter sales copy will be the death-nail to those dreams.

And that's why...

“I've Cast My Net Planet-Wide For Any Reclusive Genius Who Can Help Me Propel Your Next Promotion To Epic Status...”

Here's some of my latest finds...

The Danish X-Ray Machine What happens when you study neuro-imaging of someone's brain as they click to order your product? An in-demand Dane has the answer. He “X-rayed” the brain of prospects about to buy and found one overlooked part of the brain lit up like a Christmas tree. What's going to happen when I flick the switch on this baby throughout your sales copy?

Vivid mental imagery tied in with the powerful good-feelings of Christmas nostalgia.

The “Alphabet Cash Code”... A Swedish computer whiz conducted eye-tracking studies to pin-point the “letter shape” you should use to position the most crucial elements of your sales letter. His findings? To maximize profits... the cash alphabet should always start with the letter “F”...

The “Six-Figure” Travellers Check... A self-confessed Armani addict has fashioned a unique cash-sucking “masterplan” that foots the bill as he writes his list from Vienna one week... Venice Beach the next. I've been devouring his "postcards from paradise" for years and I'll expertly tailor his best buy now tricks throughout your e-mail copy.

The Google God Done right... Google Adwords can pour a never-ending stream of qualified buyers to your website. Done wrong... and Google will march you lockstep to the po-house! That's why I take my Adwords cues from a church going Mid-West guy known for seducing strangers with Hypnotic Google Ads... and who's quick to share his empire-building secrets.

Point readers to conflict in your copy with underlining, bolding, italics or highlighting. People feel an urge to reconcile conflict in their mind before they can move forward. So it's a great way to get people into your body copy.

The Marketer's "Holy Grail"... Believe it or not, in 1861 a French doctor accidentally discovered the true "buying button" we all have in our brains. He had no clue the pot of gold he was sat on. So the news remained lost until 1999... when an opportunist Texan dug up the doctor's findings and exposed the secret for a shocked invitation-only audience. When I snagged the polished manuscript of this event I'd no idea it would get so dog-eared... so fast!

Using the exact years these events took place makes this bullet more believable.

"With These Overlooked Persuasion Tactics In My Back Pocket I Was Pulling Clear From The "Copywriting Crowd"...

But I Was Nowhere Near Done...

It Was Time To Sit At The Feet Of A Legit...
Millionaire Maker..."

Because when the opportunity arose... I jumped at the chance to mentor with Vin Montello.

Unless you just crawled out from under a rock no doubt you know about Vin's journey from Hollywood TV writer to big-ticket copywriter...

And lucky for you...

Bringing Vin's credentials back to the reader's self-interest.

He's fearless about teaching his head-spinning students everything he knows about directing a string of six and seven-figure launches.

Here's some gems we recently discussed over a private phone line...

The secret “romance” word women respond to in copy. Guys bolt when this word crops up... (it's not love or marriage!) but whisper it to a woman and she'll swoon over your offer like it's Brad Pitt about to lean in and lock lips. (If you're marketing to women this is profit-plutonium...)

You want most bullets to be “blind bullets” or “teaser bullets”.

But not all.

Throw in a bullet like this once in a while that gives away the tactic. It shows you can back up all your teasing. And makes the other bullets that much more believable.

Using video to sell? Smart idea. Just don't make your video more than 1 minute long if it's going at the top of your sales letter (and no more than 3 minutes long if it's positioned further down the page) Any more pushes the attention span of viewers over the limit. Let the letter do the heavy selling. Your video should sell prospects on reading the letter, not make a full pitch for your product.

The real job of your headline? If you're not totally sure yourself, don't you deserve a copywriter who is?

The amazing “special effect” which turns disgustingly skeptical readers into beautiful big spenders. If you don't have the world's greatest credentials have no fear. This proven and highly-ethical tactic will come to your rescue... priming people to buy from you without a moment's pause...

“I Was One Of A Few People On Earth To Have A Handle On These “Hollywood” Sales Secrets.... But I Was Blind To The 500lb Gorilla In The Room...”

This is a summation section. It recaps. Reminds. Yet also takes people back up the copy if they've entered further down.

I can honestly say... as I've tapped into the mind of Vin Montello...

Studied the masters...

And sniffed out any reclusive genius who could help me light a fire under your profits...

“It Never Hit Me That I Could Be
Sat On An “Atom Bomb” Advantage
That Could Hurtle You To The Top Of The Marketing Food-Chain...”

Then one day I'm on Facebook catching up with old friends... reminiscing about high school.

And naturally, it took me back to trying to spit out the end of a sentence but struggling mightily.

And outta nowhere...

“Like A Bolt From The Clouds... It Struck Me...
Being A Former Stutterer Had Given Me A Bizarre...
And Unique Window Into Hidden Human Psychology...

And With It... The Trigger To Set Off A Windshield Smashing Hailstorm Of Buyer After Buyer...”

To quickly explain...

You can probably imagine it now... when you stutter other people finish your sentences for you.

They don't do it to be mean. They want to help. So they take a swing at what you're struggling to say.

Only...

Without knowing... they often get it wrong... totally wrong!

And the bizarre thing is...

Word choice. "Windshield Smashing Hailstorm" creates a much more specific and strong mental image than just "Hailstorm".

A similar, yet far more serious disconnect can happen in sales copy.

And when it does...

“Sales Are Lost Forever... Fortunes Go Unclaimed...
And Only Because A Copywriter Failed To Realize
That Today... Smack Bang In 2010...
The Game Has Changed!”

Because you are acting to improve your life in a highly skeptical age.

We both know the culprits responsible...

Weasel/ Nigerian e-mail scammers...

Tools who pedal male enhancement pills...

And worst of all...

Pond-scum Wall-Street Crooks!

Emotional hot-button right now, and a chance for me to bond with the reader as we knock the bad guys together.

These clowns and others like them have changed the playing field for decent hard-working marketers everywhere.

Cold fact is... no matter what you're marketing... whether you're doing it on-line or off...

Now... in 2010... and for the foreseeable future...

The new rule of closing the sale applies...

You absolutely must [REDACTED] for your reader. If you don't,
[REDACTED] curtains for you.

(edit: On the urging of clients, and their needs must come first, I've made the decision to save this critical cash-creating persuasion secret for paying clients only...)

“Imagine... You Type In Your Domain And Up Snaps The Hardest Hitting... Most Ridiculously
Persuasive Sales Copy You've Ever Seen...
And It's Yours To Profit From FOREVER!”

Now... let's be upfront about your options today...

You could hire someone over at E-lance to write your sales copy. Or take a chance and put your livelihood in the hands of a newbie at one of the marketing forums.

But seriously...

And I ask this because there's life-changing profit on the line here...

Can you see hard-boiled marketers like Frank Kern or Rich Schefren putting their sales copy in the hands of some guy who's read a couple copywriting books... or the lowest bidder on E-lance?!

Not in this lifetime... not in a million lifetimes!

When you're a serious player you're looking at sales copy as an investment.

An investment in yourself.

An investment in your future...

Your family's future.

Appealing to what people care most about in the world. Themselves and their family.

And if you've decided now's the time to make your move... then let's at least connect by phone.

Fair warning: Thanks to the results I'm getting for clients and the full-throated endorsement of veteran copywriters like Vin Montello... my fees are on the rise and my schedule is filling faster than ever.

The sooner we get on the phone the sooner I can block out your spot so you won't miss out.

Go ahead.

Fill out the easy form below.

There's no obligation. No hard-sell awaiting you when we talk. We'll quickly get into the unique marketing problems you're facing and see if there's a fit.

And grab a pen, because you might not be able to shut me up!

To your lasting success,

Ross Bowring

P.S. Strange as it might seem at first... now you know that to close sale after sale... it's a boom to your bottom-line to snag this former stutterer by your side!

P.P.S. Don't wait. You know I can do an amazing job with your sales copy. The next step is to fill out the easy form below so we can get on the phone and discuss your needs in detail. Go ahead. Do it now.

Clear. Simple.
Confident instruction about what to do next.

Name:

Email Address:

Your Current Website URL

Tell me about your product or service

Why do you need an expert copywriter?

What are your "big picture" goals for this project?

How did you discover me?

Magazine Article

SUBMIT MY INFO NOW

"The real deal... get him now before it's too late"

-- Millionaire Maker Vin Montello...
The Godfather Of Persuasion

Ross Bowring © 2009 Direct Response Copywriter & Marketing Consultant

Testimonial at the end to promote action.

Reinforces why the reader should be entering their details into the form above.

Cheat-Sheet

Stripped Naked Letter #1

- Quickly let your reader know your solution is easy, quick and simple.
- Select words which add to the intensity of mental imagery in the reader's mind.
- Start your letter with a short sentence to get readers onto the slippery slide with ease.
- Indirectly compliment your reader on their smarts. We tend to automatically like people who compliment our brain power.
- As soon as you can, beat down the main objections to your product or service.
- Most people are walking around with shaky self-esteem and doubt over their own abilities. Acknowledge this and reassure your reader that your solution will help them regardless.
- Bold your main benefits for scanners.
- Harmonize with the reader by stating commonly held truths.
- As an aside, mention the genre the story copy you're using falls into. You're making it easy for the reader to process the story into a familiar frame of reference.
- Make quick pivots from story based copy into "YOU" sales copy.
- Always ask yourself... is there a more compelling way to say this?
- Become a collector of "shared experiences" that nearly everyone can relate to.
- Use all-encompassing qualifying statements that let every reader know you can help them.
- Validate your reader's feelings at every turn.
- One way to build trust is to appear reliable and consistent.

- Work in wording which creates an urgency to act.
- Always be increasing the value of your product or service.
- When you use fear, don't overdo it, make a fast turn to positive.
- Make sure to give the "reasons why" your hook should be believed.
- Use "take-aways" to make people want what you're selling even more.
- Make your body copy flow seamlessly into your testimonial copy.
- After you introduce your product, give a punchy summation of its main benefits.
- When you use a pop culture reference, make sure it's nothing obscure.
- Use simple metaphor to sell complicated concepts.
- For scanners... give testimonials their own headline.
- Use "damaging admissions" in your copy. They fight off the feeling that your offer may be too good to be true.
- Use future pacing. Taking your reader into a bright future where they are enjoying the benefits of your product.
- Don't mindlessly plonk testimonials one after the other. Use them to back up claims you're making at particular points in the body copy.
- If you've got any type of readership on a blog or an e-mail list, then use that to create "social proof" that you're an authority in your field.
- If you offer it, reassure the reader you'll be on the other side of their order with impeccable post-sale support.
- Adding a small "catch" into your offer makes it all the more believable.
- Mention the "reason why" you're offering such a bargain just before you reveal the price. This way price hunters are up to speed, even if they are only entering the letter where they see dollar signs.

- Address objections head on. Suspect the reader hasn't ordered yet because they don't believe it'll work for them? Cite examples of people who once felt the same but who acted and don't regret it.
- Don't just hope the reader will "Imagine this..." follow up with further direction.
- Hammer home the guarantee in the final push to turn browsers into buyers.
- Don't chicken out. Make an aggressive call to action.

Stripped Naked Letter #2

- If your headline is about you... make sure to quickly let the reader know the letter is actually about them.
- Beginning your copy with a story? Get people into the action with short punchy dialogue, not boring back-story.
- Make your marketing a valuable read where possible.
- Force the reader to imagine the main benefit of taking you up on your offer.
- Got a testimonial you really want people to read? Lead them into it with body copy.
- Whatever the theme of your letter, continue it sporadically in your body copy through word choice, metaphor and analogy.
- If you and the reader have both been screwed over in one aspect of life, use it as an excuse to bond.
- Admit to failings. No-one's perfect and you'll win friends for admitting it.
- Use small doses of alliteration throughout your writing to promote reading flow.
- Where you can, offer an extra burden of proof.
- Give clear and simple instructions about what your reader should do next.

- Slate the alternatives to your product or services, but don't bash anyone in particular.
- Let the reader know why your offer is refreshingly different from the hundreds of "salesy" offers they get hit with every week.
- If you think your reader might be skeptical about something, acknowledge their skepticism, even share in it with them.
- Tie in your final call to action with your main benefit.

Stripped Naked Letter #3

- Got a super-bold headline? Address skepticism immediately.
- Tell your reader, who probably thinks they've seen it all before, why your product or service is something new and unique.
- When you mention your friends as an aside, you're using subtle social proof that other people know, like and trust you.
- Bond with your reader during story copy by admitting to a negative emotion or feeling you suspect they've also struggled with.
- Keep people reading by teasing upcoming straight talk.
- Don't treat sub-heads as an afterthought to break up your body copy. Create them with the same seriousness you give your headline.
- Segment yourself off from the competition. Outline what your competitors offer. Then clearly state how you go above and beyond.
- Anticipate and acknowledge your reader's non-stop desire to know what's in this for me?
- Try transitioning from bullets into a sub-headline. It eases reading flow as the reader doesn't suddenly come right out of bullets into an intimidating block of body copy.
- Play off the common fantasies your market harbors in their private moments.
- Tie vivid mental imagery in with feel-good childhood nostalgia.

- Point readers to conflict in your copy with underlining, bolding, italics or highlighting. People feel an urge to reconcile conflict in their mind before they can move forward. So it's a great way to get people into your body copy.
- In your copy... use specific years, dates, times... to give an extra ring of truth.
- Bring everything back to the reader's self-interest.
- Don't make every bullet a teaser. Give away the tactic or info once in a while. It makes your other testimonials seem more believable and it makes your marketing more valuable.
- Before you hit the home-stretch of your letter, include a recap section. This reminds reader's what they just discovered, and it brings people up to speed who entered the copy late.
- Bond with your reader by knocking the bad guys.
- Invite your reader to join an elite club. Being part of the "in crowd" is a strong motivator.
- Use a testimonial at the very bottom of your page to pull people back up to the order buttons.

Final Word

Thank you for taking the time to read this report. I hope you've found it a valuable resource you can use as a reference for a long time to come.

If you'd like to contact me about your own marketing, just go to my site and fill out the simple form at the bottom.

I'll get back to you as soon as I can and we can see if there's a fit. I'm not the cheapest copywriter out there, but if you're working with a more limited budget I'll be happy to direct you to a qualified colleague who can craft the copy you need.

The address is BowringMarketing.com

Thanks again for reading,

To your lasting success,

P.S. Alternatively, if you'd rather e-mail me you can reach me at ross@bowringmarketing.com.